RT Health
Surry Hills NSW

The RT Health project was won by bokor architecture + interiors during a design competition process against 5 other architectural firms. It involved the complete refurbishment of an existing 3000sqm brick heritage conservation office building and the addition of two new floors including a huge outdoor terrace.

bokor were engaged to carry out both the architecture and interior design on this project, including change management strategies for the relocation of their staff from burwood to the new head office in surry hills.

Once appointed, bokor carried out in-depth staff questionnaires and interviews to establish what was important in their working environment. This information was used to produce a reverse brief document that was agreed upon by the client and used as a reference document for the design.
Bokor designed and documented the building so that in 3-5 years from the client move in, the building could easily be extended and another floor added.
